FUNCTION.form

Between Numo and our parent, Kolder, we have been responsible for the development of many, if not most, of the innovative beverage insulators on the market today.

1982

Kolder Holder – 5mm neoprene can holder with a glued in bottom.

1983

Bottle Suit – the first insulator made specifically for a long neck bottle.

1998

Pocket Coolie – the first polyurethane can holder to fold flat.

2001

Bottle Jersey – the first sewn insulator to fit over bottles to look like a shirt or athletic jersey

2003

Magnetic Kolder Kaddy – the first insulator to incorporate magnets into it in order to facilitate easy stowage with or without a full beverage.

2006

Two tone insulators – the first insulators to use different fabrics to achieve multi-color looks without multi-color imprints.

One common thread running throughout our product development has been the age old axiom of “Form follows function.” It may be cliché, but that guides all of our product development. Each of the innovations listed above was first and foremost a better mousetrap. They were not always a cheaper mousetrap, but they were always a better one due to their inherent improved functionality.

Last year, we were very excited about our then-new BudBear™ and Flying-V tablet stands, both of which have new anodized colors this year.

Newly-developed items for 2013 include our Maglione™ and Rappotto™ tablet & laptop computer sleeves, the new Snak-a-lope™ reusable sandwich bag, and the Kase™ smartphone holder.

Of course, we already have plenty more items in various stages of development. Look for them to be introduced in 2013!

Since Numo has a manufacturing presence in North America, we can easily cut and sew custom items for you. Quick prototypes + quick order turnarounds + our US-based product development group equate to a streamlined process. We can offer suggestions for keeping the cost down, along with design tweaks to improve overall utility.

We frequently produce custom items to fit specific beverage containers or digital devices. Our Action Coolie™ line has also inspired many of our customers to come up with custom-shaped Coolies, making the edges of the coolie fit the contours of a logo or image.

Contact the factory and let us talk you through the process. A custom item requires more effort, but with a greater reward. Seeing your design produced as an order creates a unique branding opportunity!

We cut. We sew.

It may not look like an inventory of Coolies or Eyeglass Holders in the photo above, but all those rolls are how we do it. These rolls will be cut in-house to become any item that uses a given material... even items that we haven't developed yet!

RESPONSIBILITY

At Numo, we hope to tread lightly in all that we do.

We recognize that manufacturing consumes resources that are finite. Whenever possible, we choose alternatives that diminish our resource consumption. We're not perfect, but we work so that the sum of our choices this year amounts to a more responsible company than we were last year, and we hope that next year's Numo will be even better.

Some of the items of which we are most proud:

- » All of our cut neoprene and scuba scrap is re-used. Our waste does not end up in landfills.
- » All of our facilities have undergone lighting retrofits that have dramatically reduced electricity usage.
- » We have moved a large dividing wall in one of our facilities to reduce our air conditioning needs.
- » We just completed a roofing upgrade that will also impact electricity usage for our largest facility.
- » We have a testing program and protocol in place to ensure the products we ship to our customers are safe.
- » All of our facilities take part in a recycling program for all paper products.

We are proud to offer items that allow our customers to tread lightly also. Those include:

- » Any product using our EcoCoolie foam. (Contains >80% post-consumer recycled material.)
- » Klutch lunch totes represent an alternative to single-use paper and plastic bags.
- » Our new Snack-a-lope is made from an EcoTwill (a blend of RPET and organic cotton) and also offers an economical alternative to disposable plastic lunch bags.
- » We make a point to offer reusable coffee mugs and water bottles as alternatives to the single-use disposable kinds.

lightly

Most full-color magazines, catalogs, brochures, and retail packaging use some form of four-color process (a.k.a. "4CP" or "CMYK") to be able to render photos, illustrations, and graphics that use shading or gradients. Any of this kind of imagery can be applied to certain Numo items for a surprisingly reasonable cost.

THE PROCESS

Four-Color Process gets its name from the fact that four colors are used to create a very large gamut of color. The four colors are Cyan (a bright aqua blue), Magenta, Yellow, and Black, hence the "CMYK" you see used as another term for Four-Color Process. (The "K" stands for Black because Blue had already staked its claim on the letter "B".)

By printing various amounts of each of these inks on top of one another, other colors can be shown. For instance, printing some Yellow and Cyan in the same spot will render a green color. Add some Black to it and the green gets darker.

The printing process determines how much of each of these colors to be applied to the paper (or whatever material you're printing on).

SUBLIMATION

For most of our 4CP printing, Numo uses sublimation. Without getting into too much science, what happens is a mirror image of your imprint gets printed onto paper, then the paper is placed tightly against the product receiving the imprint. Adding some heat allows the printed image to transfer from the paper to the item.

The paper with the mirror image is called a transfer, and it can be printed on specially modified inkjet printers or on commercial printing presses.

One thing to note is that sublimation ink is transparent (It's technically a dye, rather than ink.), so it needs to have a white surface in order to show up properly. If you want a purple background behind your logo, that purple gets printed along with the imprint itself rather than depending on the material color behind it.

FOUR-COLOR

WHAT 4CP IS GOOD FOR

4CP really shines when you're using photographs or more complicated art:

Photos. The most obvious use would be a photo of a product, but also consider photos of facilities (past, present, or future) or of key players. (Real estate agents or political candidates are a natural fit here.)

Art. A painting or illustration, or a nice background texture can enhance many brands.

Complicated brand images. Many modern brands have logos that depend on things like 3-D shading or shadows and highlights. Much of this would be tough to reproduce in traditional screen printing, but it works beautifully in 4CP.

THINGS TO AVOID WHEN USING 4CP

Of course, there are some trade-offs when dealing with 4CP sublimation.

Large areas of flat color (like in the background) can look uneven in some cases. Adding some texture pattern to these areas will hide the subtle irregularities. Grays and earth tones can be particularly hard to keep consistent in large areas.

White backgrounds on some fabrics can look a bit dingy in some cases. On can or bottle insulators, we recommend using white as only an accent color in the design.

Some colors cannot be reproduced by 4CP. Of particular note are some bright oranges that don't come out quite as intense, and royal or navy blues can tend to shift a little towards purple.

4CP ARTWORK SETUP

4CP sublimation doesn't require vector art quite like some screen printing does, but it's still very helpful. It is necessary, however, to have high-resolution art. This means at least 300dpi at the final printed size. High-res photos or illustrations can make for relatively large file sizes, so please make sure you consider that before emailing. Files up to about 50MB can be uploaded via the Numo website. (Look for the "Upload Artwork" link on nearly every item page on our site.) For files larger than 50MB, we recommend using one of the free file sending service websites available.

Your art can be set up in RGB or CMYK color mode. If there are any PMS colors you wish us to try to match, please check with us before placing your order. Be aware that many PMS colors cannot be matched with perfect accuracy using 4CP printing.

We strongly recommend sending your art as a layered PSD (Photoshop-native) file.

Scuba vs. Neoprene

SO, WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

Kolder, Inc. (NUMO's parent company) began making beverage insulators out of neoprene in 1982. Back then, the primary beverage insulator was the old, fat, extruded insulator. Neoprene offered great insulation properties in addition to being compact and offering multi-color imprints. Neoprene was the Cadillac of beverage insulators, but discerning consumers were willing to pay the price for a superior product.

Scuba arrived on the scene in the late 1990's. It was developed as a cheaper alternative to neoprene for beverage insulators. The material itself is constructed of an "open cell" polyurethane foam with a polyester fabric on one side and a tricot on the other. Conversely, neoprene is a "closed cell" rubber-based product with a polyester or nylon fabric on both sides. Scuba's tricot doesn't stretch nearly as well as nylon and poly, but guess what, it's cheaper!

(The irony is that the actual suits worn by scuba divers are really neoprene.)

You might be asking yourself, what we mean by "open cell" and "closed cell"? Well, take a look at this picture. You can see air "bubbles" in the foam of the scuba (on the left), whereas you can't see the bubbles in the neoprene (on the right). When we say "open cell", we actually mean that we can see the bubbles in the foam, while neoprene is "closed cell" because we can't. The bubbles in neoprene are still there, but they're just not visible ("closed-cell" is a bit of a misnomer).

Now for the science bit... heat is transferred in three ways: conduction (transfer through physical contact), convection (transfer through the movement of air), and radiation (complicated). The rate at which heat is transferred into your beverage is a function of all three, and when you put an insulator on it, you're slowing that transfer in all three ways. Any insulator inhibits air flow around the can or bottle, and therefore impedes convection. When you have a neoprene insulator on a can or bottle, heat has to be transferred through a much denser, less conductive, material than scuba. What happens on a small scale is that in scuba foam, the heat is able to transfer through a little bit of polyurethane, and a lot of air (bubbles). So neoprene, which is mostly rubber, is a better insulator than scuba.

You might have heard about the "R-value" of insulation. That is a measure of the rate at which heat is transferred through something. The higher the R-value, the better your insulation in your attic and walls, right? Well, neoprene has a higher R-value than scuba.

A CASE FOR WRIST BANDS

At a recent trade show, we used our BroadBand in conjunction with a giveaway offer we were doing at the show. In order to be entered into the drawing for an iPad, visitors were given a BroadBand as a "ticket" in exchange for dropping their business card into our fishbowl. The time of the giveaway was printed on the BroadBand, so visitors would return to our booth for the drawing.

As the drawing-time came near, our booth – and the adjacent aisles – were overflowing with people shoulder-to-shoulder, waiting to see if they won the iPad.

The next day of the show, we repeated the offer, but we used a different color of BroadBands so visitors would have to make sure they got that day's "ticket" to be entered into the new drawing.

Drinkware

Printing on Drinkware

UV INKS

UV-cured inks are a relatively new technology that allows us to print directly onto ceramics and glass. It has become the default for most single-color printing on many of our drinkware items.

Using UV Inks has several advantages over traditional ceramic inks:

- They offer some colors that would be impossible or cost-prohibitive with ceramic inks. Bright pinks and purples are no problem for UV inks.
- They are more opaque, reducing the need for double-printing or printing down white to add a color on top of it in many cases.
- The cure time is a fraction of what traditional ceramic inks require. (30 seconds compared to about 2.5 hours!)
- There is less danger of burns, fire, etc., so our staff and equipment are safer.
- Their formulations are free from lead, cadmium, and other heavy metals, complying with CPSIA standards, and no labeling needed for California Prop 65!

UV inks do have a few drawbacks, though. There is some loss of durability compared to traditional inks, and they are slightly more prone to scratching. In perspective, though, our testing shows that UV inks will hold up to over 500 washes in standard domestic dishwashers, which should be plenty long for most promotional uses.

CERAMIC INKS:

Ceramic fired inks are the tradition when printing onto glass or ceramics. They are extremely durable, and all the inks we use at Numo today are free of lead. However, after application to the item, they need to be fired in a lehr for over 2 hours at just over 1100°F. If, after firing, any printing problems are found, it's a time-consuming process to test another run to verify the issues have been resolved.

Also, to clarify, the name "ceramic" refers to the ink's formulation, not the surface onto which it's applied. Ceramic inks are also used on glass items.

DECAL:

For very tight registration or items that have a concave sidewall, we use ceramic inks on a decal. These decals are screen-printed onto paper, with a layer of transparent ink covering the design. Once dry, the printed paper decals are soaked with water, releasing the imprint from the paper. The transparent layer, called a "cover coat" keeps the artwork together after it's released from the paper. The imprint can then be slid off the paper and onto the item, the water squeegee'd out (just like the decals on a model airplane), and then fired in the lehr just like the ceramic inks mentioned above.

FX INKS:

Magic ink is thermochromatic, meaning it becomes transparent, or "disappears", when the temperature is raised to a certain point. Numo has magic ink available in black, and it can be printed over your imprint so that your message is revealed when the ink is heated by the beverage in the cup. Magic ink is printed as an additional color on top of one or more ceramic inks. The creative possibilities of using an imprint that changes are almost limitless!

PRECIOUS METALS:

Numo offers decoration using precious metals (gold or silver) for an upscale look to your message. These can be used within the main imprint area, or as a halo band around the lip of the item. Contact Numo for details on pricing and availability.

SUBLIMATION:

Sublimation, often used interchangeably with "Four-Color Process" allows us to put photographic-quality images onto some of our ceramics items for a reasonable cost and very low minimum quantity. In sublimation, the image gets printed onto paper first, then transferred to the item. Unlike decal, though, sublimation simply uses about 30 seconds of heat and high pressure to make the transfer happen. It does not need the long curing time like ceramic inks.

The main negatives with sublimation is the limited number of items it can be used on, and some PMS colors are not able to be matched. (See the article on Four-Color Process on pages 6-7 for more information.) Sublimation inks are also transparent, so they need an opaque white surface in order for them to show up.

However, our sublimation process is compliant with CPSIA and Prop 65 standards.

Magic Ink becomes transparent, or "disappears" when it gets hot. The heat from hot coffee or tea warms up the ceramic mug, and causes the Magic Ink to change from an opaque black to clear, revealing anything printed behind it. When the mug cools back to room temperature, the ink becomes opaque once again.

To make a great Magic Mug promo, think of ways you can use Magic Ink to hide a portion of your message, then reveal it later. Things like a curtain that disappears to reveal what's behind. Or perhaps an image of a computer screen or TV that turns on to reveal your message on-screen. Showing a question, then revealing an answer is a popular idea. A night sky can turn to daytime.

The main thing to watch out for is that the ink can't change into something else. One possibly helpful way to think about it: Print out your base art onto a sheet of paper. For the Magic part, print or draw it on a piece of clear film. Lay the film over the art. This would be the "cold" iteration of your concept. Lifting the film back off the art will show the "hot" iteration. If your concept works in this manner, it will probably work with our Magic Mugs.

Still stumped for ideas? See our web site for our EZ Magic™ program, offering stock designs that you can use to add your own message.

We are Numo!

Every day, you'll find people in North America taking and manufacturing your orders. We call ourselves "Numonians". In addition to processing your orders, there are a few other things you might not know about us...

Numo is proud to provide health insurance to every employee in the United States at no cost to the employee. Additionally, we have a health fair every year where employees undergo biometric screenings and spend time reviewing their results with professionals. Our local hospital aggregates all of our health fair results and organizes lunch and learns to help educate us on risk factors that were identified in the screenings.

We also have a free onsite health clinic. Twice a week for two hours, a nurse practitioner is available to employees and their families. A Numonian can take care of any minor issue he or she might have or follow-up on numbers from the health fair all without leaving our building or paying for an office visit or co-pay.

During lunch three days a week, we bring in a professional trainer to lead an exercise class in our Kaufman facility. On any given day, you'll find sewing machine operators sweating next to a customer service supervisor. The classes are offered at no charge to the employee. Almost 40% of our employees attend at least one class per month, and 30% attend at least two per week.

Additionally, on any given day you might find Numonians playing volleyball or basketball at breaks or taking in a gravel grinder bike ride during lunch.

Our hope is to educate Numonians about their health while offering everyone an opportunity to take care of himself or herself without having to worry about finding time outside of work.

In addition to our health and wellness related programs, here are a few other opportunities you might find a Numonian taking advantage of:

- Numo trades volunteer time for paid time off. A Numonian can volunteer for four hours at a 501c (3) organization of his or her choice, and he or she will receive an additional 4 hours of paid time off.
- Numo through our parent company, Kolder, Inc., is proud to be a member of the Fair Labor Association (FLA). Our facilities have all undergone both internal and third party social compliance audits.
- We offer telecommuting to administrative staff.

Numo was proud to be named to the Counselor Magazine Best Places to Work list in 2012. While the award came as no surprise to anyone, we were proud of the recognition nonetheless.

Numo adheres to the standard industry definition of reproducible art and reserves the right to accept or reject art depending upon the job.

*Artwork will be proportionally resized to fit maximum imprint area unless otherwise specified within the art file via crop marks or other notation.

Electronic art (spot color): Vector art is preferred for spot color printing. Numo recommends current versions of Adobe® Illustrator® or CorelDRAW®. File should be saved in EPS format and all type in each file should be converted to curves (paths, outlines). JPEG and TIFF files can be acceptable only if sent in high resolution.

Electronic art (4-color process): Numo requires Adobe® Illustrator® (.ai) or Photoshop® (.psd, .tif) files in high resolution or vector art. It is strongly recommended to send fully-layered documents in case any adjustments need to be made. If sending .ai files via email, please include an EPS or PDF version of each file to avoid file corruption.

Camera-ready art (spot color): An enlarged, clean black and white copy is recommended. Non-camera ready art will incur art charges.

Art Charges: $60.00 (g) per hour.

CALIFORNIA PROPOSITION 65

Numo decorates glass and ceramic products using printing material that will comply with current U.S. Food & Drug Administration (FDA) Guidelines for heavy metal release standards, however California does not recognize the Federal standards and chooses to enforce its own standards.

The Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act of 1986, referred to as Proposition 65, requires that consumers be warned about products that may contain one of over 800 listed substances. Among these substances are lead and cadmium. Proposition 65 does not ban any product from being sold, it just requires a warning to the consumer.

A warning label is all that is required to comply and exact warning language must be used.

Numo offers decorating enamels that comply with Proposition 65 that do not require warning labels:

We offer ceramic enamels that can be used for glass and ceramics with either direct screen printing or decal application. Some colors are not available, please contact factory.

We offer organic based colors for one color imprints

We offer four color process sublimation on ceramic mugs

Numo continues to offer low lead, and no lead high gloss enamels for those customers who require them. We will apply warning labels for all glass or ceramic products destined for California that require these traditional enamels at no additional cost.

It is the distributor's responsibility to notify Numo in advance of shipments that are going to or may end up in the state of California. By the way of this statement, the distributor and the end customer holds Numo harmless from all liability for alleged Proposition 65 violations, including all costs associated with defending any legal claims due to Proposition 65 violations.

CPSIA

In 2008 the Consumer Product Safety Commission passed the Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act of 2008 (CPSIA). CPSIA places tighter regulations on lead content contained in products intended for or marketed towards children under the age of 12. Children's products can be considered any products with packaging, promotions or advertising that displays the product as appropriate for children 12 and younger. Numo offers two products (youth promo bands and Frisbees) that could be intended for use by Children under the age of 12. It is mandatory that these items be marked with the proper tracking information at the factory. All other products offered for sale are intended for adult business marketing purposes. If a distributor or end user plans to distribute or market one of these adult products to Children under the age of 12, we are fully capable of meeting the lead content requirements and adding the proper tracking information to the product, but must be informed by the purchaser at the time of the order.

It is the distributor's responsibility to notify Numo in advance of shipments that are marketed or intended for use by children under the age of 12. By the way of this statement, the distributor and the end customer holds Numo harmless from all liability for alleged CPSIA violations, including all costs associated with defending any legal claims due to CPSIA violations.
